

"He looks like Jay from Chakra with his long hair, coat and cap, and the only thing that Ozark's missing are miscellaneous machine parts — that's why they call him "Cat-Man!"

With his long trench coat, silent, confident mannerisms and long, flowing hair, he's the quintessential Japanese hero—the tough outer of few words and a heart of gold. Or at least steel."

Wizard Magazine

"This unique hero inhabits a teched fantasy world that's part Mad Max, part Code, and he breezes about the wastel landscape looking like a cross between Chew Yan-Fat and Rungar Hagen, his mon-with-no-name sure attracting doe-eyed babes like a magnet. Mohito Yashitani has a good feel for the graphics of his subject matter, with clean, crisp views of cities and deserts, distinct character design and an arty, open art style..."

Manga Max

"The stories in these books contain lots of sly humor and great black-and-white manga art. There's lots of action, but the violence isn't too graphic. Sympathetic female characters are strong in their own right. With such a funky hero, girls will enjoy the books as much as boys do."

NAME: Bok Gunk

CODE NAME: Eat-Man

OCCUPATION: Explorer

SPECIAL ABILITIES: By consuming a weapon or object, Eat Man ingests its capabilities into his body and can subsequently transform the flesh of his arm into that item.

PERSONALITY: His calm temperament and cool and detached charm are magnets for attractive young women.

WITH SO MANY MONSTERS, DEMONS, AND BRIGANDS RUNNING RIGT, EAT-MAN HAS A LOT ON HIS PLATE...

MEAL ONE: Accompanied by a mysterious young woman with little to no explorer experience, give Devil King valuable crystal sphere in exchange for promise to stop waging war.

MEAL TWO: Scale Dragon Mountain to retrieve the sword of a legendary slayer. This sword is said to be so powerful that any dragon that sets eyes on it turns tail and runs for its reptilian life. En route, avoid being exploited by your anonymous employer and protect pretty stowaway.

MEAL THREE: Race handsome prince's devoted assistant to rare flower she believes will win her master's undying devotion.

MEAL FOUR: Armed only with umbrella, rid town of bloodthirsty brigands while staying on good side of your cute "disasterlies."
